The leftmost vertical column shows the classification of psychical Relevant in: Dimensions and Differentiations.

The Differentiations include everything psychically relevant at different levels. I have derived them from general language patterns, as I described in detail in the chapter 'Metapsychology'.

The Dimensions represent fundamental meanings (ø1-7) to each psychically relevant element. The bold-signed terms of: exE Axis: absolute (A) relative (R) and nothing (Ø) are keywords for all dimensions.

The horizontal rows show - from the left to the right - the development of psychical symptoms or disorders up to the schizophrenia.

The column A includes Epistemechnics, B to D Psychotics, columns E to N Schizophrenics and columns O to V Psychotics, especially for Schizophrenia.

'The neutral psychic Relevant' one finds on the top horizontal row leftmost. Here I listed general and personal 'neutral' forms, functions and actions in columns A to D in all aspects.

This corresponds essentially to the classification of the parts 'Metapsychology' (column A) and 'Psychology' in the above named publication.

I called the next bigger segment (columns E to K) Emergence and character of the It, I mentioned the term It, as a new stronger entity, created by 'inversions', which dominates psychic relevant (p+) systems, especially human. With inversion, I denote a confusion of fundamental meanings. As fundamental meanings, I suppose the above-mentioned dimensions.

I.e., if absolute, relative or Ø resp. the other fundamental meanings are confused, I speak of inversion. The confusion of such fundamental meanings is ubiquitous. Typical examples are ideologies.

These, as well as similar dogmatic attitudes in families or in the individual, occur with an absoluteness claim that absolutizes something Relative and at the same time negates and excludes others.

This leads to fundamental traumata of meanings. The columns I should show with the symbol Σ, that the its make Event-feelings and Event-Personal too.

The its have another effect on the person in the long term than at the short term. In the column K the unfavorable long-term character of the it is shown and his possible impacts in general from L to N and from O to S the impacts on a person. Finally, all possible symptoms of Schizophrenia are listed exemplarily from column T to V.

A process is important to understand the genesis of the disorders, which I called 'Spreading and Compressing' and described closer in 'Metapsychiatry' - i.e. every inversion spreads in such a way, that it can cause all - or at least numerous, as well as one disturbance can be caused by all sorts of inversions. Here I distinguish obligatory and optional effects

['main and secondary impact-directions" of the inversions]. For example: One inversion in the dimension's aspect at, caused by corresponding ideologies (e.g. in cell 6at) causes obligatorily disturbances in this at aspect, but all other disturbances can be caused optionally. But, on the other hand, one disturbance is able to be caused also by all other inversions (see column F).
